How men and women see gender equality differently

How much progress have we made with gender parity? Your answer might depend on whether you're a man or a woman, argues Laura Liswood, as she explores what we can do to resolve this difference in perception.

Clifton Jackson, MPA Figure out a way to make good $$ while doing something you like to do. You don't have to love it, but you have to live it. Work for and with positive people who want you to be successful. Employees don't leave companies, they leave managers. Remember, not every manager is a leader....and you don't need to be a manager to lead. So don't be afraid to challenge the status quo. You might learn something in the process.

Rodney Dietert Tuesday March 24th, I will be speaking on how to recognize and take advantage of unexpected career opportunities. Examples will include how I was personally thrust into the middle of the new healthcare revolution involving the microbiome. The forum will be the Society of Toxicology Annual Conference in San Diego, CA.
